A tribute to femininity

Impressionistic study of a form that can be differentiated sufficiently often in all directions
– not as a measure, but as a gesture.

Turned away from the back,
but open to the soul:
in light, in shadow, in being.

For Emma Mia

Because every line that leads to the centre
is a line of love.

The lines of the body –
human, sensual, reflected in light and form.

A silent tribute to femininity,
to continuity, to the beauty of touch without words.

A tribute to the flow

Layer by layer –
like thoughts that do not flow against each other,
but carry each other,
the water follows its path.

It does not deviate,
It does not overcome –
it glides along,
finds lines in resistance
and transforms hardness into movement.

For the real

Because what is soft flows the furthest.

The flow of water –
layered, free, yet guided.

A glimpse of nature in its gentle persistence,
where stones rest and movement becomes meditation.

Two lines – one river.

The body senses what the water knows:
is not smooth.
is follow, feel, flow.
